101 Ways to Cut Business Insurance Costs

101 Ways To Cut Business Insurance Costs explains in plain English how you can reduce or control your business insurance costs without exposing your organization to uninsured losses that it cannot handle. You probably manage your taxes on a proactive basis to control your tax burden as best you can. If you take the same approach with your insurance program, you can also control your insurance premiums!

However, there is one major stumbling block—not usually faced by tax managers—to taking control of property and liability insurance costs. While the Internal Revenue Code is a published document in the public domain, the insurance industry's "rating manuals," which govern how your premiums are calculated, are not so easily obtainable. And, like the tax laws, you would probably need an interpreter to explain how to apply them to your business if you were to obtain them.

In some cases, customers must maintain their business participation agreements with publishers in order to gain access to some publications within ReferenceConnect*

101 Ways To Cut Business Insurance Costs does this for you. It is based on our four decades of experience as consultants for numerous commercial and public entities, like insurance agents and underwriters on behalf of commercial insureds, and as researchers into insurance industry practices and procedures.

- offers suggestions for modifying coverage to correspond with contractual risk transfers;
- critiques the good and potentially troublesome areas of a number of manuscript additional insured endorsements in use;
- reflects the latest ISO endorsements;
- contains over 300 case citations and covers the hottest areas surrounding additional insured statuses, such as degree of fault, the primacy of coverage, and third-party over actions.

MCS-90 Book, The

The MCS-90 Book will open your eyes to the many potential pitfalls, coverage traps, underwriting concerns, and claims issues lurking under the surface of the seemingly innocuous MCS-90 endorsement. If you buy insurance for, sell insurance to, or underwrite insurance on commercial vehicles, you need this must-read reference to master the nuances and application of the MCS-90 endorsement.

The MCS-90 endorsement is an often misunderstood and litigated one-page endorsement mandated by the Motor Carrier Act of 1980. The MCS-90 is attached to auto insurance policies for the purpose of certifying that the insured maintains the required minimum level of financial responsibility in order to compensate others for public liability, including pollution, arising from an auto or motor carrier (trucking) accident. Strictly speaking, the MCS-90 is not a traditional endorsement that enhances or restricts coverage, but more akin to a surety agreement guaranteeing payment. The most obvious category of businesses that need this endorsement is motor carriers (truckers) of all types. Additionally, however, it is often needed by others with vehicle fleets such as private carriers.

Commercial Inland Marine Handbook

ISO's Inland Marine Handbook gives you forms, endorsements, declarations, and policy writing instructions for the 12 classes that make up approximately 80% of commercial inland marine non-filed premium volume. And since these coverage forms are compatible with the forms for other lines of business, the handbook also benefits those who write package policies.

Statistical Plan – *Carriers Only

Each year ISO collects billions of records of premiums and losses statistical data from insurance companies and compile the data into aggregate insurance statistics, available to help insurers comply with state requirements to report data and give regulators information from many insurers in a common format.
