BPO and why it matters

Business process outsourcing (BPO) is a standard practice in insurance and other industries, a strategic option that provides several key benefits. When working with a reputable provider capable of delivering comprehensive and integrated services, BPO allows carriers to accomplish more by refocusing their internal resources on growth objectives while trusting an external partner's proven expertise to synchronously manage workflows.

Importantly, BPO helps carriers scale efficiently without compromising oversight. By leveraging capabilities and professional skillsets to enhance day-to-day processes, BPO helps top insurers improve their compliance operations for a competitive advantage and superior agent experience. Additionally, outsourcing can immediately unlock complex functionalities that carriers may not have in-house, without needing to shift teams or develop new divisions from the ground up.

In one confidential case study focused on a top 30 property and casualty insurer, outsourcing adjuster licensing operations helped to significantly increase their overall service capacity for policyholders and claims processing.
